August 9 Recap

It was a fantastic meeting last week with some great singing and guitar play. The guitar play is usually on point at our club, but it was a relief to hear someone actually singing in tune. Singer/songwriter, Aliza Hava, was our speaker and opened with an original song and also gave us a sneak preview to an unreleased song.

Aliza is not only a musician, but also an entrepreneur. She founded Musician’s BASS which is a SaaS platform dedicated to empowering independent artists with a toolkit to manage their careers. The company recently won The Startup Challenge this past summer, hosted by CSUMB. Musician’s BASS was one of 83 companies that entered the competition. The prize money she won will be used to launch a streamlined electronic press kit solution for artists and bands looking to book their own shows.

Miscellaneous

Masi Bayless was the fortunate winner of our weekly door prize. The picture below was taken right before she fumbled what happened to be an expensive bottle of wine. However, I was surprised that there wasn’t an immediate dog pile for the prize since it is football season! I guess those “must be football season” commercials don’t happen in real life.

Janet Gluch gave a great overview of the water purification trip to Africa. Steve and Susan Karon also attended the trip. Janet mentioned that women in the village often travelled up to three hours a day to gather water. The team not only installs the equipment, but also provides some business training on selling the water to neighboring villages.

Bay Bridge Series

The series began on Tuesday in San Francisco with Bumgarner on the mound. I couldn’t figure out if the A’s broadcast had a small strike zone or if in fact Bumgarner and Smith were throwing that much paint. Even so, there were some late game dramatics but the Giants held on for the 3-2 win.

Game two was a day game on Wednesday. This time the strike zone wasn’t a mile wide and the better team prevailed with the A’s winning 9-5. The A’s third base gold glove, Matt Chapman, led the way with two home runs. The two teams will meet again on 8/24 and 8/25 in Oakland. Bets will be taken at the Elks bar prior to the 8/23 meeting.
