Detective - Jim Bargetto

Quote of the day: “I got to go to the louvre.” Tom “number two” Parker.

Invocation: Linda “the great” Burroughs challenged us to be great because we have a responsibility to make others great. Our greatness inspires others to be great. Now we understand what makes John so great.

Raffle: Chris “paranormal” Murphy knows how to make a first impression. He offered a pair of tickets to the varsity club of the Warriors basketball team as the raffle prize. The prize was won by a guest. It was the guest’s first visit. The guest is considering joining our club. Coincidence, we think not!

Announcements: November 11th is Flag Day. Our Rotary club members have been raising and lowering the Flags for a variety of remembrance days. Your editor has been involved in these special projects. It is hard to describe the feeling of service and unity among friends and the strangers whose life’s served to defend our freedoms. This is a family friendly event that propels the idea that together, as one nation, we can achieve great things. Please see Jeanette “patriot” Pagliaro for details. Also announced was Jan “straight” Derecho’s Paul Harris times 2. That’s straight up good! Finally, Donna “italiana” Maurillo shared beautiful calendars that featured the artwork of Ed Penniman and penned by Donna herself. They were truly wonderful gifts for our membership.

New Member: Joe “air” McNair accepted his red badge and all the requisite desk material for membership. Joe spends his free time drinking pina coladas and getting caught in the rain. He is not into yoga and he has half a brain. He likes the feel of the ocean and he’s into champagne. Grab Joe and say hello!

Detective: Chris “I got ice in my veins” Murphy felt the pressure of delivering the detective report so he diverted attention from himself and asked our members what they were feeling happy about. Kris “front row” Munro was happy about the support of volunteer Rotarians for the Bite of Reality program that teaches high school seniors about budgeting. One Rotarian, Aleene “blue steel” Althouse, was grumpy she was charged 16k by PG&E. Turns out the uber wattage blow dryer isn’t so energy efficient. Chris got back on track by catching Janet “bolt” Krassow before she left early. Then he questioned Jim “peach” Zenner about his early mustache start for Movember. We know it’s for charity but Jim is a competitive fellow. He then fined Ian “talking to you” Mackenzie for not relieving Mary Rose from bartending duties at our recent social at the Burroughs residence. Nor did Ian bother bringing her dinner. Ian who knows his wife well, was confident that she was in her happy place because she enjoys drinking her meals.

Program: Erik Uden is an exchange student who took a 25 hour flight to be here from Germany. Erik hails from the northern most town in Germany literally called “north”. He was born on an island no bigger than seven miles. Erik is no older than 16 but has already written a variety of artificial intelligence programs, a program to control a robot with his mind, and he has built a fully autonomous vehicle that can spin in place. Erik won a lottery to be here and then promptly was invited to a birthday party for the founder of Adobe and met the president of Stanford’s Nano technology lab. He later got to use the lab to run some of his programs. Later, while hanging out in the basement of his buddy’s parents’ house, he built a robot and a fusion reactor with spare parts. Wes invited Erik to stay with him so that Erik could build a DeLorean time travel machine so that Wes could go back to a time he still had hair.
