Program: Fiona Ma of the board of equalization is the chief tax collector in California. She explained the board of equalization was created to provide uniformity to the assessment of taxes. It was created to fix irregularities in how taxes were collected and remitted to the state. Fiona went to school in Rochester New York. She became a CPA and in an attempt to grow her business became the president of her local small business Association. That experience introduced her to politics. She decided to pursue a career in the field. Her parents were not happy about this. They told her that she was wasting her life and they moved to Las Vegas. Fiona was a lone in California so she ran. She ran for Sunset District supervisor. She said it was a miserable experience dealing with politicians. So she put her head down and spent four years building playgrounds and serving the community. She then got elected to the assembly. She got 60 bills signed by two governors. She is mainly concerned about education and helping small Business owners with taxes. She gets her message out with community outreach and education events. She enjoys karaoke on her free time.
