We had our Holiday program, and it was an extravagant affair. We did not see Santa although Bob Bosso would make a great impression. We did have a pleasant lunch filled with music, wild men, wilder women, and wild hair. Let's get to it.

Open Singing:

Sam Bishop began the meeting with a new song. He asked us to sing along but first he politely asked us to mute ourselves. Not many know where the mute button is. None the less the song was fantastic it was called Auld Lang Syne.

Invocation:

Michelle Costa shed words of wisdom prior to the holidays. She reminded us it has been an interesting year. "the best and the most beautiful things in the world are cannot be seen or even touched the most beautiful must felt in the heart." She then wished us happy holidays!

Guests:

Duff Fisher brought his better two thirds: his wife Paula. Paula took exception to this because she is a smart logical type and if she makes two thirds that means she is twice as big as he.

Announcements:

Aarushi Thaker from PCS presented about the interact club at PCS. She founded the club there. She is the daughter of the Deval Thaker. She is the president and founder. Before she began, she thanked Bob Bosso, Ross Condit, Sarah Madsen, Stephen Gray, Kris Munro. PCS is a newly founded club. They were founded in August 2020. Their project is to fund raise for children in Yemen. They will raise funds by hosting a movie night in late January and working with Sees Candie's. Their community service project this year will be working with the red cross to help medical professionals find people that are having an emergency. She was happy and thankful for our club helping her grow the 13-member club.

Defective report:

Jill Stone began the meeting with Happy Dollars Sharon Caiocca is happy that David Heald had such a meaningful impact on her and her husband, Fred's life. She was impressed with how unselfish and thoughtful a person he is. David Heald is happy for the 48 years of his career in banking. So, he donated $48 he would make it $50 but since he will be retiring and on a fixed income the $2 mean something. John Burroughs spent a lot of time in the banking industry and he helped David get to $100 by donating $52. Richard beach is happy to have his son and family to come up and stay with him for a few weeks and get out of LA and the ever-growing COVID-19 problem. Jill wanted to continue the merriment from the social and asked Rotarians to share some of the merriment that they have going on in their homes. She asked Rotarians to include photos of their holiday décor. She said that those who submitted photos did not need to donate because it is the Christmas season. She then reminded us that it is the giving season, so it always feels better to give than to receive. She started with Sarah Madsen who had a Christmas trees with ornaments only on the top half of the tree because last Christmas she got two cats and this year to save her from tears she's putting everything up high. Next were photos of Jeanette Pagliaro's cute grand babies inside present boxes. Now I know its super cute but is anyone concerned about their work conditions? I mean they were naked and working inside an office the size of a shoe box not to mention they are way under 14 years old. Next was Michelle Costa who shared a near last photo of her Christmas decorations. Apparently, some lunatic driving around recklessly nearly took out all her decorations. Luckily, she took some pictures, so she had photo evidence in case she needed to make an insurance claim. Next was local celebrity and our own deranged lunatic Tom Parker introduced us to his gazebo which serves as a fancy bathroom for his new puppy. The puppy's name is Ripley. As her namesake suggests she is after everything. The dog has brought a lot of joy to Tom's life because now he gets to fill holes Ripley has dug up. Donna Maurillo shared her Christmas stocking that gives instructions on how to knock. Knock once if you are naughty, knock twice if you are nice, and knock three times if you are really naughty. Maurice Carillo is so bad he doesn't knock doors just open. He shared his tree that is a revolving Christmas tree with mermen. The top of the tree has a fairy so that he can rule the tree. He also won the Christmas sweater contest by wearing a trash bag and decorating it. The bar is high for next year. Merry Christmas and happy holidays from the Stones.

Program:

Christmas concert presented by Mary Rose and Cindy. Mary Rose is related to our own Ian. They are lovers, parents, and life of parties. Cindy loves music and was in a real-life Rock Band. They played a duet of many classic holiday tunes. Finally, we saw a video of Mary Rose with her hair dyed red, white, and blue. Just like the American flag
